

Nowadays, when you meet someone, it only takes a brief moment to be captivated by them; a day or two to really like them, and perhaps a week to fall in love with them - at least you think you are in love with them. However, if that relationship fails, it takes a lifetime to get over it. And more than likely, you are disheartened over a person who was not meant for you from the beginning. You ignore the warning signs and dismiss that soft inner voice inside of you (God) that is telling you that person is not right for you. And before you know it, you have invested your precious time and do not want to walk away from the relationship which is the BIGGEST mistake most people make, not walking away soon enough. In this book, the author shares personal details about a former relationship with a person she knew was not right for her. The author tells how it was God's love, grace, and mercy that helped her to recover from the disastrous consequences of that failed relationship. This inspirational self-help book is interactive allowing the reader to answer questions and document personal thoughts about their encounters with failed relationships due to being with a person that they knew was not right for them.

Don't get me wrong: I don't regret any of my relationships, and I am so because if you're with the wrong person, you probably already know it. The real "right person" is timeless, and right regardless out in spreadsheet, careful to reassure myself that I was doing it for me and not for him. I don't even know what I thought about during that ride, and as far as I recall.
